It may not be amiss in this report to mention some of the objectives toward which the schools are striving. The most obvious of these aims is the imparting of such knowledge as seems needed for participation in modern day activities. In addition to this the cultivating of certain habits and attitudes is vitally important. In order to be successful in school and in later life a child must learn promptness, industry, orderliness, responsibility, and honesty. He must learn to co-operate and get along with his mates. To reach these objectives the schools need the help of the homes. The physical wellbeing of the children depends largely upon the parents. As we all know, not all children learn with equal readiness. Encouragement by parents to slower learners to work a little harder and a little longer will often cause success in the long run. Parents are cordially invited to visit the schools and offer any suggestions which will make the work more effective.

Respectfully submitted,

EDWARD A. JANES, Superintendent.
